17	A. Yes.
18	Q. Do you know why left the department?

22	She left to go to another institution.
23	Q. Do you know which institution that was?
24	A. I think it may have been NEC, the New England

So --10 They identify in their own local area for which Α. 11 that person is responsible. A responsibility is to 12 identify other Harvard alumni in the area who would be 13 helpful in recruiting and reaching out to and interviewing potential candidates for admission and candidates for 14 15 admission. 16 And are the alumni they identify and provide, is there a list provided to the admissions office? 17 18 Α. Yes. 19 Q. Okay. And this is presumably after the local 20 committee has solicited, you know, interest and gotten back 21 feedback that this person would be interested in serving as an alumni interviewer? 22 23 A. 10	Q on the interview once it's completed?
11	A. I'm sorry. I should have understood the question,

14	Q. Is that a formal document? Is it a form?
15	A. Yes.
16	Q. Okay.
17	A. Typically.
18	Q. And is it typically submitted electronically?
19	A. Yes.
20	Q. Okay. And is it like a form that you fill out
21	online, or is it a form that gets scanned in and sent in?
22	What's the format?
23	A. Generally online, submitted directly online.
24	Q. Okay. So you log into a website and you fill out

12	A. Yes.
13	Q. And then is that made part of the admissions file
14	that is subsequently considered?
15	A. Yes. And yes.
16	Q. Okay.
17	MR. WOLFSON: Could we take a brief

mail, and people regularly complain about not being admitted. And they, as I said a minute ago, have various arguments to make about that. And so it's hard for me to remember or distinguish one from another.

- Q. What kind of a response do you give -- answer do you give when you receive those types of complaints?
- A. We explain that the process is holistic and complex, and we have many fine applicants, and we have a committee process that can choose only a few.
- Q. Is there standard language that's used to respond to any of those types of complaints?
- A. We do guide our staff in standard language, various versions of which seem -- whichever one seems most appropriate to what's being asked for.
- Q. So is there -- is there a sample letter or language that's maintained electronically?
- A. Yes. We have sample letters that we have shared with them.
- Q. Do you recall receiving any of those complaints from other faculty members?

MR. WOLFSON: Objection.

A. I don't remember receiving complaints from faculty members, except general complaints about "Can you tell me why you didn't take Mary Smith, who I wrote you a letter
